TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 21, 1359.

FASHIONS FOR JUNE. Among the most remarkable novelties in the fashions of the present season we must notice the adoption of birds as trimmings for hats and bonnets. On a recent occasion the Empress of the French wore a bonnet with which crape, with a humming bird placed on a spray of lilac, and on riding-hats birds of considerable size are placed as ornaments, and none but those who have seen it can imagine the pretty effect of the cock pheasant in its glorious plumes at the side of a riding

Among the fashionable stuffs, printed cambries have many admirers. The new fashions in this material are remarkable for elegance and simplicity. Many of these are made in small checks of various shades on white ground, like the narrow striped and checked tuffetas - and it is on this account they are called pereale tuffetas - in plain English, cambric sarsenet. This new material has a very good effect in sea-green and nankin; it is also very pretty in pink and blue, and in various shades of blac on a white ground. To those among our readers who wish to unite elegance with economy, we particularly recommend the pereale taffetsa.

The actual taffetas, of course, still remain The actual taffetas, of course, still remain cases cases in favor. Of those taffetas some of the new-trents' Heavy Signet Rings, Laest have small Pompadour broche flowers on a white ground, inclosed in checks, formed by a very fine colored line. Dresses of this material should be trimmed with bows of rib-bon matching, or at least in harmony, with the color of the stuff. Some of the milanais Camco, Mosaic, Coral, Garnet, taffetas are in broad striped violet, green or brown, in two shades.

As relates to the make of dresses, it is a known fact that there has been an attempt to restore the fashion of skirts with the breadths cut narrow at the waist; and gradually widening towards the bottom, but we shall be much surprised if this fashion gains ground. Sleeves are made flat at the top of the arm, and opened from the bottom to the elbow, showing the full tulle or muslin under-sleeve, or the thicker muslin one in a morning dress. There is another style of sleeve in vogue made very wide and open, lined with silk and trimmed round the inner edge with quilled ribbon. This sleeve is suitable in warm

Bodies of dresses are made either pointed before and behind or round. The plain skirt is not discarded, but it must be worn very full and long. In the way of trimming, quilles have disappeared, but applications of darker materials than that composing the dress have a very good effect in designing the corsage and imitating the effect of the basque.

FISHING IN JUNE.

A party of gentlemen from Hamburg projected a fishing excursion to the Edisto river a tew days since. Lines, hooks, bait, &c., were duly provided and packed, with a reasonable allowance of liquids to wet the bait, in a champagne basket. The liquids were in a square bottles. Square bottles pack sungly and a champagne basket is precisely the most convenient for their deposit .-Nothing had been forgotten and the party looked forward with the most pleasurable emotions to the excitement of the excursion, loads of fish and a good time generally.-Without delay they entrusted themselves to the care of Jim Meredith, the popular conductor on the South Carolina Railroad.—

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

JUDGE GOULD TO THE POINT .- The trial of James Glass, for the murder of Richard Owens, is now in progress before Judge Gould, of Troy, at the Over and Terminer in

Dr. Ferguson having yesterday been called by the prosecution to prove the cause of Owens' death, testified that Owens had some bruises on his head of a comparatively trifi-ing character, and that he had a gun-shot wound through the heart. On cross-exami-nation, Mr. Whiting, put a variety of quesnation, Mr. Whiting, put a variety of questions to the Doctor, as to whether the bruises on the head might not have caused the death of Owens; whether, if those bruises might not, more severe bruises would; whether, if more severe bruises would not have caused by the foregree they might not have caused W. EVANS and J. H. PRESTON, is the first the death of Owens, they might not have caused the death of a man of Owens' size, and so forth. After Mr. Whiting had pursued this line of questioning till, perhaps, some of the jurors began to doubt whether poor Owens was in fact dead, Judge Gould took the witteness.
